W. C. RALSTON'S REPORT WAS CORRECT.

The interview of W. C. ("Billy") Ralston, assistant treasurer of the United States at San Francisco, published in another column of this issue, is well worth reading. Mr. Ralston, who made a report some seven years ago, predicted what is transpiring in deep mining in Tonopah at the present time. It will also be remembered that after a careful examination and study of several weeks of Tonopah and Goldfield districts the report of Mr. Ralston, from a mining engineer's standpoint, was the first to reach the public and his views have proven correct.

DEMAGOGUES AND TRUSTS WIN.

The folly and hypocrisy of Champ Clark, La Follette and the other members of house and senate who talked so glibly and foolishly of annexing Canada and betraying the farmers into the hands of the trusts are now on their heads.

Without a doubt the false impression they created by their demagogic outbreaks while the reciprocity agreement was being debated in congress caused the defeat of Sir Wilfred Laurier and his liberal party. The success of the conservatives in the dominion is a reactionary victory. It was achieved by the trusts and the demagogues working together, in some instances by deliberate conspiracy and in others by methods that ran parallel to the same end in that they confused the popular mind.

The subsidized press of Canada and the special interests, rallying there after their humiliation in the United States, took up the cheap bravado of Champ Clark and republished the vapid prediction he made on the floor of the house to the effect that one of these days the Canadian provinces would be brought, willynilly, into the union of states. They knew that his statement had no substance, but they proclaimed the fact that it had come from one of the officials highest in the service of the American people and they had little difficulty in making their readers and their hearers believe that it represented the sentiment of the American people. Clark was not then speaker, but a few weeks later he had been elected to that great office and the forecast was identified in Canada with the position and its responsibilities.

Annexation was the most feared bogey of the campaign, but another factor that contributed to the defeat of the cause of reciprocity was the organized work of the American trusts across the line. In the United States Senator La Follette, fresh from battling in the interests of the lumber and paper trusts while the tariff was under discussion, took his stand against President Taft and charged that the proposed reciprocity arrangement had been drafted for the profit of the vast industrial monopolies. He knew that his argument was false, but persisted in it to the last and even influenced some of the leading progressives in congress to vote with him.

What was the sequence in Canada? Why, La Follette and his followers had given the reactionary conservative leaders and the financial interests back to them another effective argument, and as a result much was made of the charge that the American trusts had plotted with the American president. For authority, the conservative papers and speakers quoted La Follette. The attitude of La Follette, says the Sacramento Union, they contended, ought to clinch the proof, but they refrained from showing that La Follette had fought the reciprocity bill because its schedules provided for removal of the duties on lumber and wood pulp cancellations would have destroyed the lumber and paper monopolies so well served by the Wisconsin senator when the Payne-Aldrich law was before congress. They pointed to Clark and La Follette and swept the dominion in a whirlwind campaign to which the American trusts contributed a fund estimated at more than half a million dollars.

A sensible commercial understanding between the two countries, and there is no denying that reciprocity would have immediately justified the hopes of its proponents by distributing its benefits to all classes. However, the two peoples have been denied it because the demagogues in the United States played into the hands of the trusts and the trusts used them to mislead the Canadian electorate.

Demagoguery is the most useful ally of the special interests, for with its aid they can pursue their vicious purposes with a fair assurance of making their pretenses successful. It serves them when their outlook is most ominous. This time it has helped them to kill a great popular reform and so confuse the American political situation that there is no telling what will happen.

As far as annexation is concerned, we are of the opinion that the Canadian people will soon learn that they have been fooled.

TOO ROUGH FOR JOHN.

After all the tumult and anticipation, the title "The Honorable" will not stand before the name of John L. Sullivan. The fist which reached the tender portions of Mr. Jake Kilrain's anatomy but failed to land upon Mr. James J. Corbett will never be extended to grasp the hand of the voter. The Congressional Record will never hold a speech winding up with the flamboyant, "Yours truly, John L. Sullivan." When the insurgents and regulars line up for the next setto, the gray head of John L. Sullivan will not blaze in the thickest carnage like the helmet of Navarre. With the announcement of John L. Sullivan's candidacy for the house of representatives, the general public became confident that there would be some real action in the halls of state before long. But it is not to be. The name of John L. Sullivan has been withdrawn from the lists, and the sessions of the house will not be any more exciting than usual.

It was Mrs. John L. Sullivan who dashed cold water upon the hopes of the old gladiator and those of his possible constituents. "No, John L. is not going to run for congress this year or any other year," declared Mrs. John L. Sullivan. "The game is too rough."

John L. meekly agrees with the head of the family. Perhaps the old gladiator's manager is correct. It was an easy task for John L. to travel about the country knocking out anybody who would agree to get into a ring with him. It is recorded that John L. never failed to stop any pugilist who went up against him. Sometimes he battled with two or three in a single night. This could hardly have been called gentle, but it is evident that John L. and his present capable manager consider that it was not as rough as the game of politics.

There is no doubt that John L. would be willing to step into the roped arena again if his country should call him, but to request his presence in congress is asking too much. Even a pugilist possesses only a certain amount of endurance. It might be deemed reasonable to demand that John L. reappear in the ring as a "white hope," but to induce a poor prizefighter to enter the rough and brutal game of politics would be unfair.

STUDY FIRST, THEN PLEASURES.

There is a fine rumrump in the Vallejo, California, high school because the principal has issued an order to the effect that all students who do not diligently pursue their studies shall be deprived of the social pleasures of school life. If they lag in their classes they are not to be allowed to attend dances or other entertainments, he has decreed, and they in turn resent what they hold too exacting discipline.

To our mind, the principal is right, and other schoolmasters might follow his example. Of course, the teacher should enforce such a rule with discretion and not insist upon the attainment of a fixed percentage. One student can make a mark that another cannot reach, no matter how hard he try, and yet the latter is none the less deserving of recognition for the effort he has made. In other words, it is the effort, the sincere endeavor to accomplish something, and not the proof of accomplishment that shows whether the student is appreciative of his opportunities and willing to make the most of them. Naturally some students are brighter in their studies than others, but the percentages accredited to them do not always represent what they get out of their school life.

The principal can safely make a general rule, flexible at his will, that any student found deliberately neglecting his books and allowing other interests to engage his mind, shall be denied participation in both the social and athletic activities of the school. This would be fair in every sense and would work a hardship only on a hardy person's ideas as to the responsibilities he must soon assume.

The rule could be applied to both boys and girls and would be effective in either case. They could all be given to understand the nature of its requirements and in a very short time their obedience would be unconscious. They would comply with its demands without knowing they were doing so.

THE SAME HERE, BROTHER.

What has become of the suit against the directors of the Nye and Ormsby County bank, which was instituted and ordered prosecuted, oh so long ago? Can anybody tell? Why is this matter not attended to and the people, the depositors, given at least a little run for their money? There is some $19,000 of Ormsby county money tied up in that affair, which, it is claimed, can be recovered in 15 minutes if gone after in the proper manner. If this is the case, why is it not gone after by those whose duty it is to attend to such cases? Some one is evidently not doing his duty—and for some reason. Can anyone tell? An Appeal representative has endeavored to sift the matter but cannot get head or tail to the affair. We have asked those who are supposed to know and no two stories are the same. The facts of the matter are being suppressed. The suits are allowed to hang fire, that is evident, but for what reason? It is time this matter was attended to as it should be. The people want it and will shortly demand it. It will not be long now before this affair will be sifted and then, perhaps, the truth will be known. This cannot be kept under cover forever. Let the ones whose authority it is give this matter their attention or give the true facts for not attending to their duty toward the people. So far it is a farce.—Carson Appeal.

Judge Gary having returned from Europe, we shall expect to hear of some more of the steel trust's golden rule operations.

Australia is not so far away after all. The boys who are visiting us from the Antipodes know how to play baseball.

Charles Kirchen, who has just completed the erection of a new stamp mill at Unionville, returned to Tonopah this morning.

W. C. Ralston, the Tonopah optimist, after examining several of our big mines, departed for his home city, San Francisco, yesterday morning. Billy says he is glad he came here and only wishes his visits were more frequent.

Hon. Hugh H. Brown, wife and two little sons, returned to Tonopah this morning, after a six weeks' sight-seeing tour in New York and other principal eastern cities. Mr. Brown says the odor of the fragrant sagebrush smells awfully good to him and his family and they are glad to be home again.

OCCIDENTAL ENTERS CITY OF TONOPAH

R. W. Moon, Arizona and Nevada manager of the accident department of the Occidental Life Insurance company of California, has appointed S. R. Moore & Company of this city claim adjuster and local agent.

The Occidental's plan is one of the best ever placed among the insurable public as there is no red tape in securing claim payments.

S. R. Moore & Company are the adjusters and they pay the claims. In other words, the same agency that collects your premium, pays your claim. Instead of mailing the claim blanks away and waiting the ten or eleven days, you are paid in full in about five minutes after you present your claim.
